The Traditions of Stevens

STEVENS HIGH SCHOOL

CLAREMONT, N. H.

"The traditions of Stevens had their origins in 1868."

Foreword

Stevens High School is proud of its traditions. For eighty-three years they have grown and flourished until today's student finds himself surrounded by fine traditions, in honor compelled to uphold them, and, according to his capacities, desiring to contribute to their growth. In every field of endeavor which constitutes student life at Stevens, these traditions, some old, some new, are to be found. These take the form of the high excellence expected in studies, the precision bordering on perfection found in the musical organizations, and in the conscientious efforts of our athletes, sometimes resulting in victories, always rewarding in sportsmanship. Social events, too, traditionally set a pattern of good behaviour accepted by students and faculty alike. After graduation these traditions live on in the hearts and in the minds of devoted Stevens alumni. In the pages of this yearbook a sincere effort has been made to portray tangibly the factors that through the years have made great the traditions of Stevens.

"For the information of strangers, and those at a distance, it is proper to mention that the school owes its existence to Paran Stevens, Esquire, of New York." From the school report and yearbook of 1868

Judge Albert D. Leahy congratulates retiring principal Stephen A. Doody and new principal Edgar L. Lord.

To the class of 1953:

I wish to congratulate the editors and the sponsors on their choice of theme for this year's "Red and Black." Any institution of long standing builds up a body of tradition through its active years. Stevens High School is no exception, and it affords a wealth of such material accumulated for eighty-three years. I hope that this issue dedicated to the portrayal of Stevens' traditions will bring much pleasure to her alumni and for many years to come to the class of 1953.

Most sincerely yours,

Edgar L. Lord

Stevens High School is in Claremont.

The History of Stevens High School

The summer of 1866 is memorable in the history of Claremont and paramount in the history of our high school, for in that year Paran Stevens of New York City, son of early Claremont inhabitants, donated the sum of $10,000 to found a high school, provided the town would appropriate an equal amount for that purpose. In the autumn a town meeting was called to consider Mr. Stevens' generous offer. With great enthusiasm and unanimity Claremont's citizens voted to accept the donation under the condition named. They voted to raise and appropriate $15,000 which, with Mr. Stevens' $10,000, was to be used to purchase a lot and to erect a school building. A committee of five selected the homestead lot of the late George B. Upham at the corner of Broad and Summer Streets containing nearly two acres as the prospective site and purchased it for the sum of $2,500. A dignified, two-story brick structure was erected and said to be, "one of the most elegant, substantial and convenient edifices for the purpose for which it was built in the state." Containing four large school rooms, large vestibules, a basement for the heating plant, and a spacious hall in the upper story, the school accommodated one hundred and twenty-five students. That was the beginning of an institution which has since proved invaluable to the city of Claremont.

Mr. Stevens contributed full half of the cost of the building and the lot on which it stands. Soon after its completion, he gave the town $10,000 toward a permanent fund for the support of the school. He also presented life-size portraits of George Washington and Daniel Webster, painted by eminent artists, and a Chickering concert grand piano. Before his death in 1872, Mr. Stevens bequeathed $40,000 to be added to the $10,000 before given for a fund, "the interest of which is to be used for the school's support." At the annual town meeting in March, 1868, five men—one from each religious society in town—were chosen to be the high school committee. It was also voted to give this new institution of higher learning the name "Stevens High School," to honor Paran Stevens. It was the expressed wish of Mr. Stevens and of the town that the school should be kept entirely free from anything like sectarianism. Following this, the committee laid down one stipulation—that, "the morning session will begin with a reading of the Bible and the saying of the Lord's Prayer in unison." Mr Stevens is very well described by one of his intimate friends in an obituary notice: "He was a man of quick and clear intelligence; bold and at the same time cautious; full of energy, untiring in diligence; a thorough New Englander in his fearless shrewdness whilst equally noted in his fair dealing and integrity. To the sterling qualities which commanded respect and earned wealth, were added a decided sense of justice, courteous and large hospitality, and warm affection."

The requirements of entrance and graduation were much stricter years ago; so that only those who were thoroughly prepared in reading and necessary subjects were admitted. The first term at Stevens began on the seventh of September, 1868, with ninety-eight scholars and a faculty of four including Dr. Nathan Barrows, the principal. Early curricula contained no vocational or scientific courses but rather a general, classical background. The first graduation class in 1871 consisted of twelve members. They graduated in the Opera House, as the high school was not large enough to accommodate them, and went from there to the Town Hall where the Senior Reception was held.

By 1908, the enrollment had increased to one hundred and fifty-six. An addition was deemed necessary, and on April 10, 1909, the town voted the sum of $8,000 to be expended on a single story unit to be added to the front part of the building to relieve some of the congestion. It contained a laboratory, a classroom, a headmaster's office and a manual training room in the basement. Even that addition was found inadequate by 1914 because it was obvious that the building had to be radically remodeled, for a yearly increase in students seemed inevitable. For this purpose the town voted an appropriation of $73,000. This building was of brick with cement trimming and contained twenty-one rooms instead of the former nine.

In 1929, the School Board upon the consent of the General Court, took over the responsibility of Stevens High School from the town. The building was again remodeled at a cost of $300,000, and a new extension was added to accommodate the Junior High School. The old building, itself, was greatly altered, and various improvements were installed. The three floors contained five classrooms each. At this time the teaching staff had increased to nineteen and the enrollment to four hundred and thirty-four.

Currently, Stevens High School has an enrollment of five hundred and twenty pupils under the excellent supervision of twenty-nine capable, well-trained teachers. In great contrast with the curriculum of the nineteenth century, five adequate courses are offered—the English, Scientific, Classical, Mechanic Arts, Home Economics and the Commercial—all of which aid in preparing the student for his future life work. This fine selection is sure to fulfill any young person's needs, whether he plans to go on to college, enter industry, or go directly into the business world. Opportunities are provided in many fine extra-curricula activities to develop special talents, and to teach the student to use his leisure time constructively, to learn the meaning of co-operation and to form worthwhile, lasting friendships. Through the years Stevens High School has valiantly upheld her many fine traditions and is continually bringing new honor and glory to the name of Paren Stevens, the founder of an integral part of Claremont.

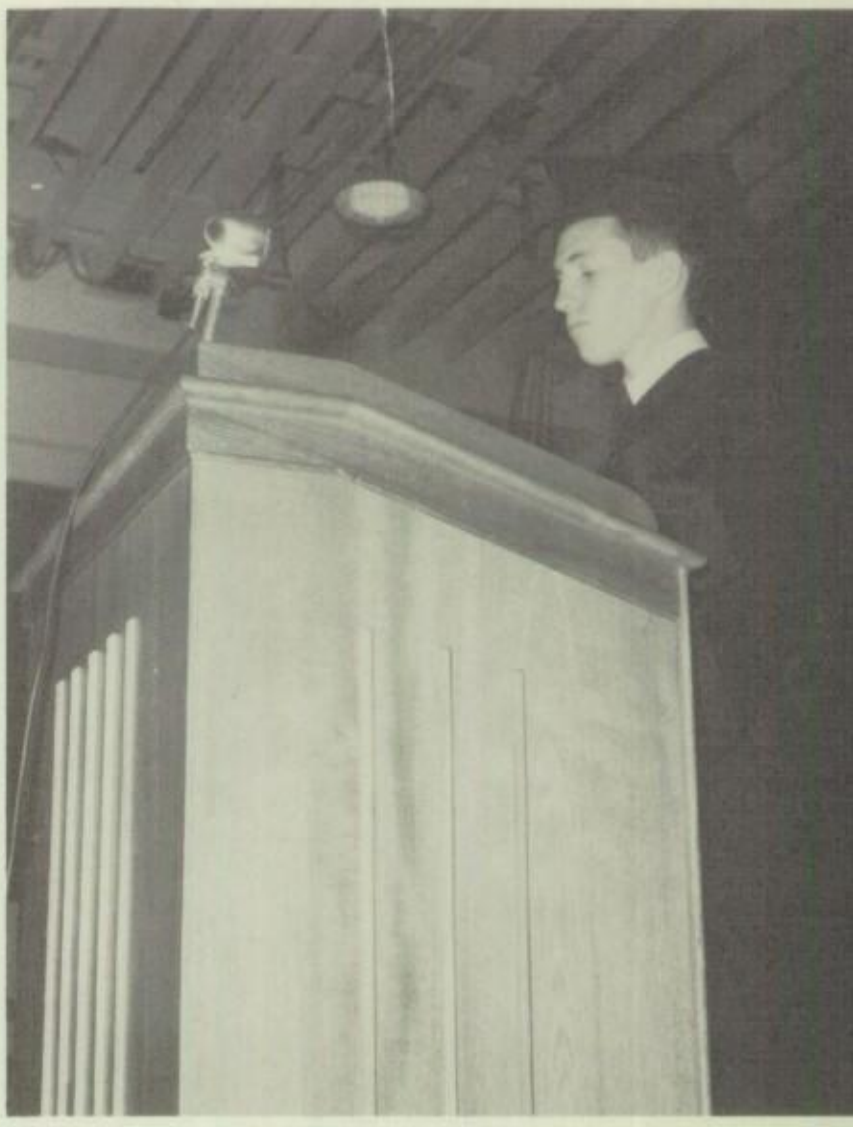
"Believing free schools to be the bulwark of free institutions, the committee, the principal and his assistants, have harmoniously labored, to the end that our youth, whether resident or abroad, might here find ample facilities for acquiring a liberal education, sufficiently complete in itself; or, by obtaining the diploma of the school in its classical department, be eligible for admission to any of our American colleges or universities which admit without examination."
Stevens High School Catalog, 1891-92

June is the time of beautiful traditions, of Class Day, of graduation -

Solemn dignity pervades the auditorium as the Seniors in traditional cap and gown await the start of graduation exercises.



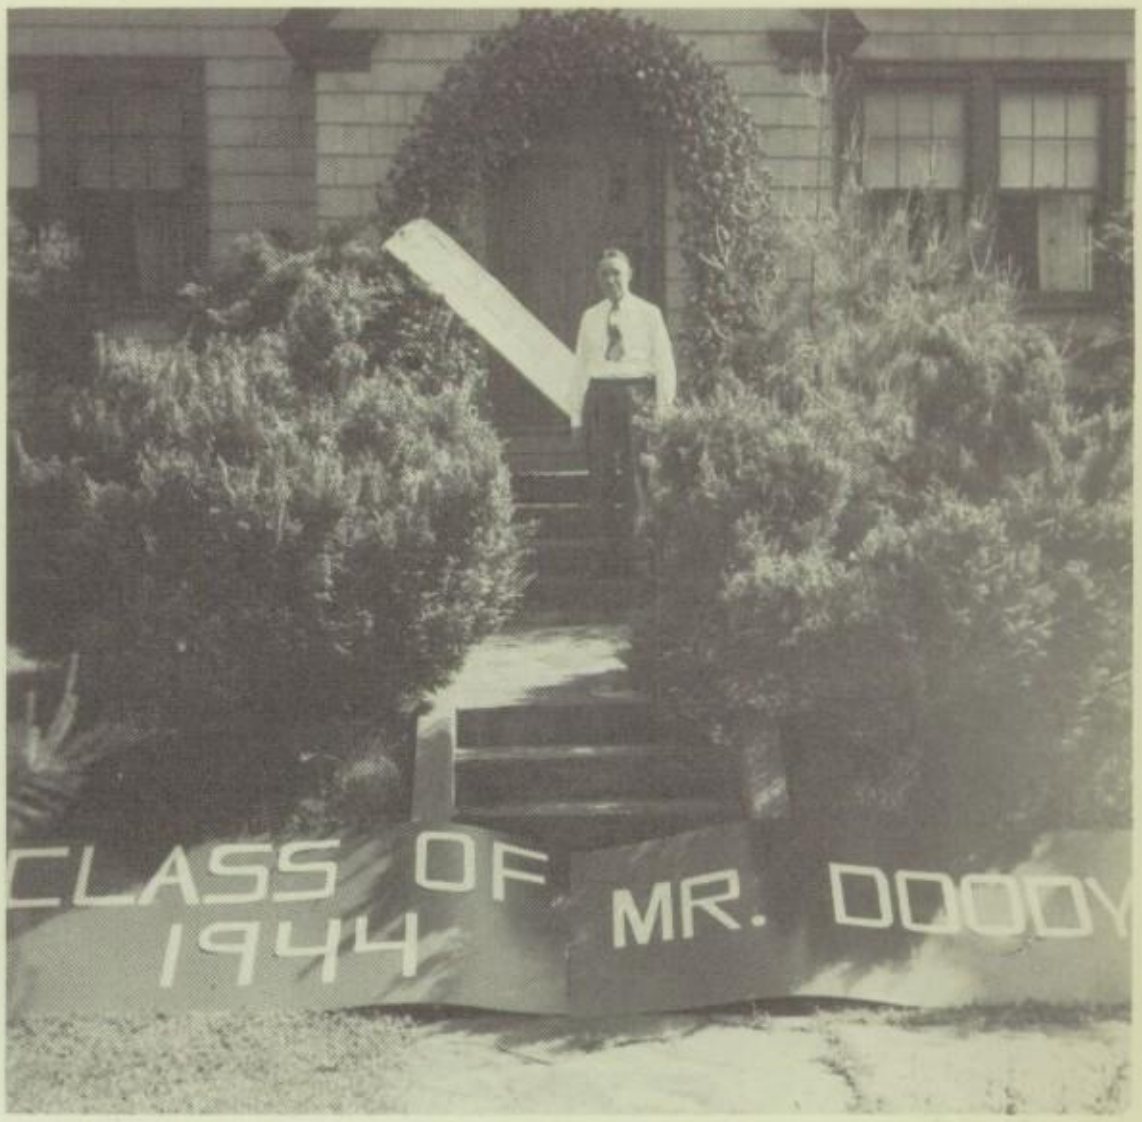
Robert Ekberg inserts a light note in the Class Day activities as he reads the Class Prophecy.

Editor of the '52 Red and Black, Merton Thompson dedicates the issue to Mr. F. Lester Trafton, Superintendent of Schools.

Class Marshal Jason Chick leads the traditional procession as the Seniors march to their Baccalaureate service.

of the oldest high school alumni association in our country."

The Class of '51 float rolls down Pleasant Street as the oldest high school Alumni Association in the country holds its traditional annual parade.

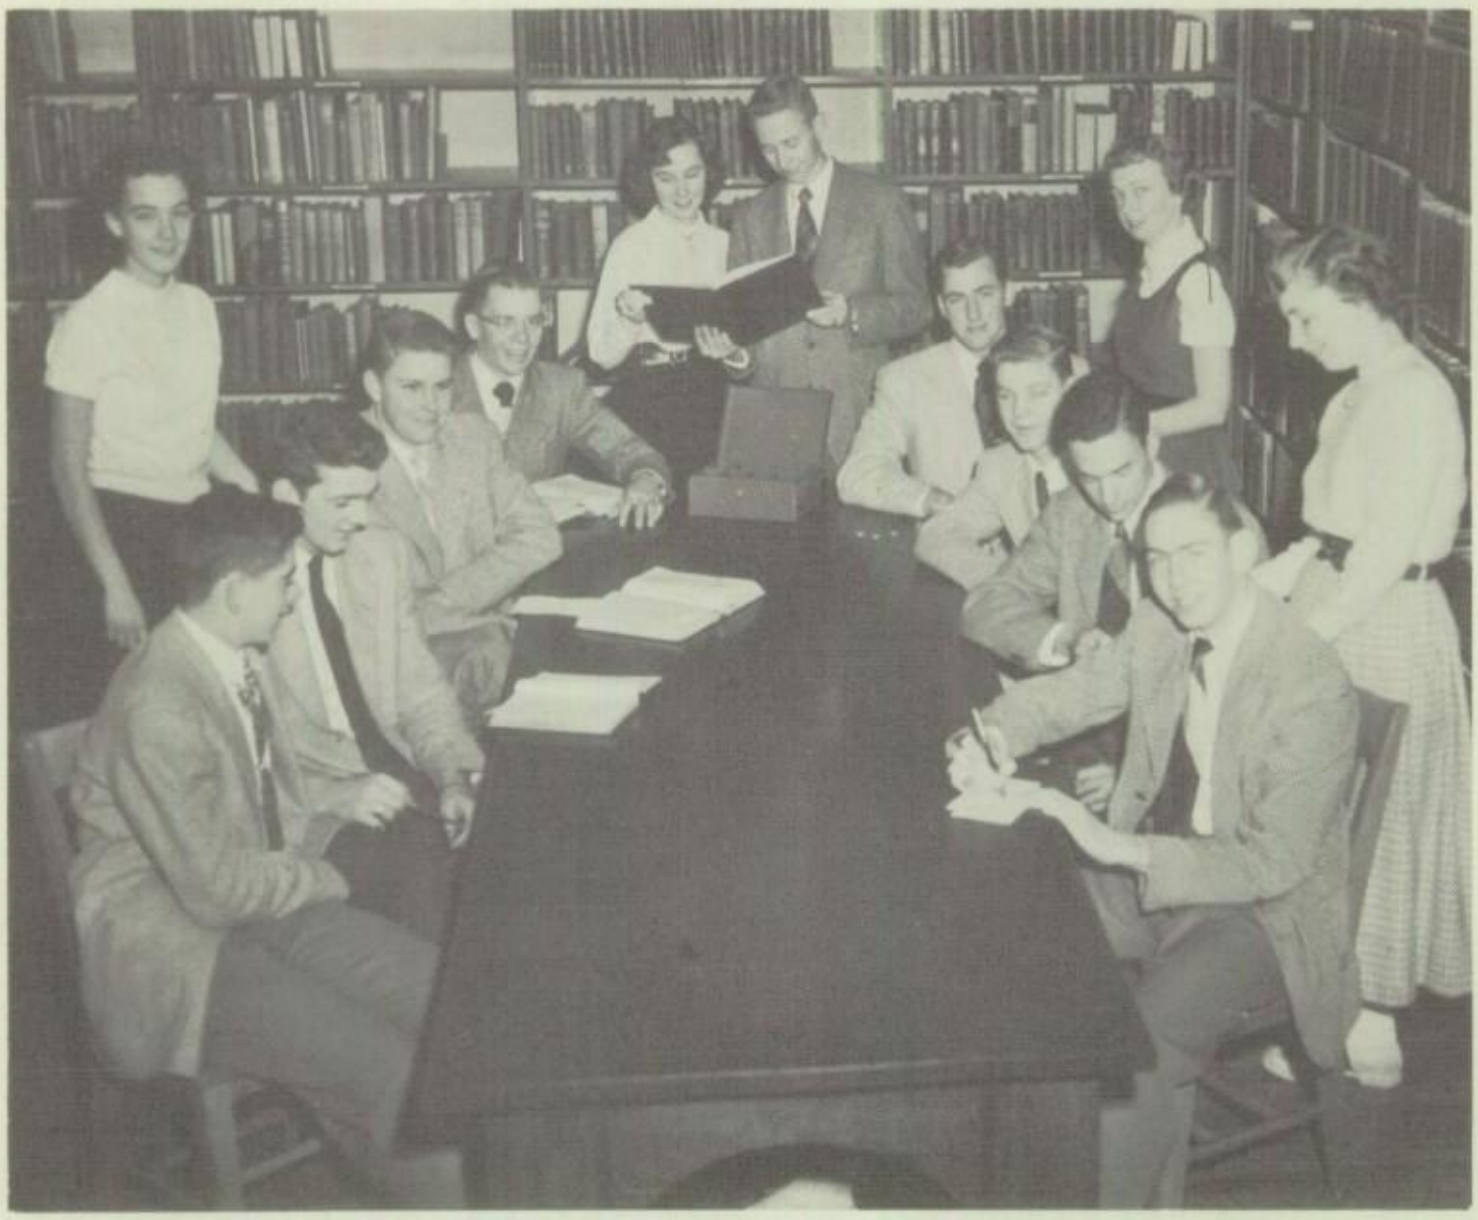


A horseshoe of roses presented by the class of '44 honors Mr. Stephen A. Doody retired after thirty-one years as Headmaster of Stevens High.

At the Alumni banquet honoring Mr. and Mrs. Stephen A. Doody attended by over six hundred alumni of Stevens.

Humor in the Alumni parade is provided as the class of '46 depicts fashions current at the turn of the century.

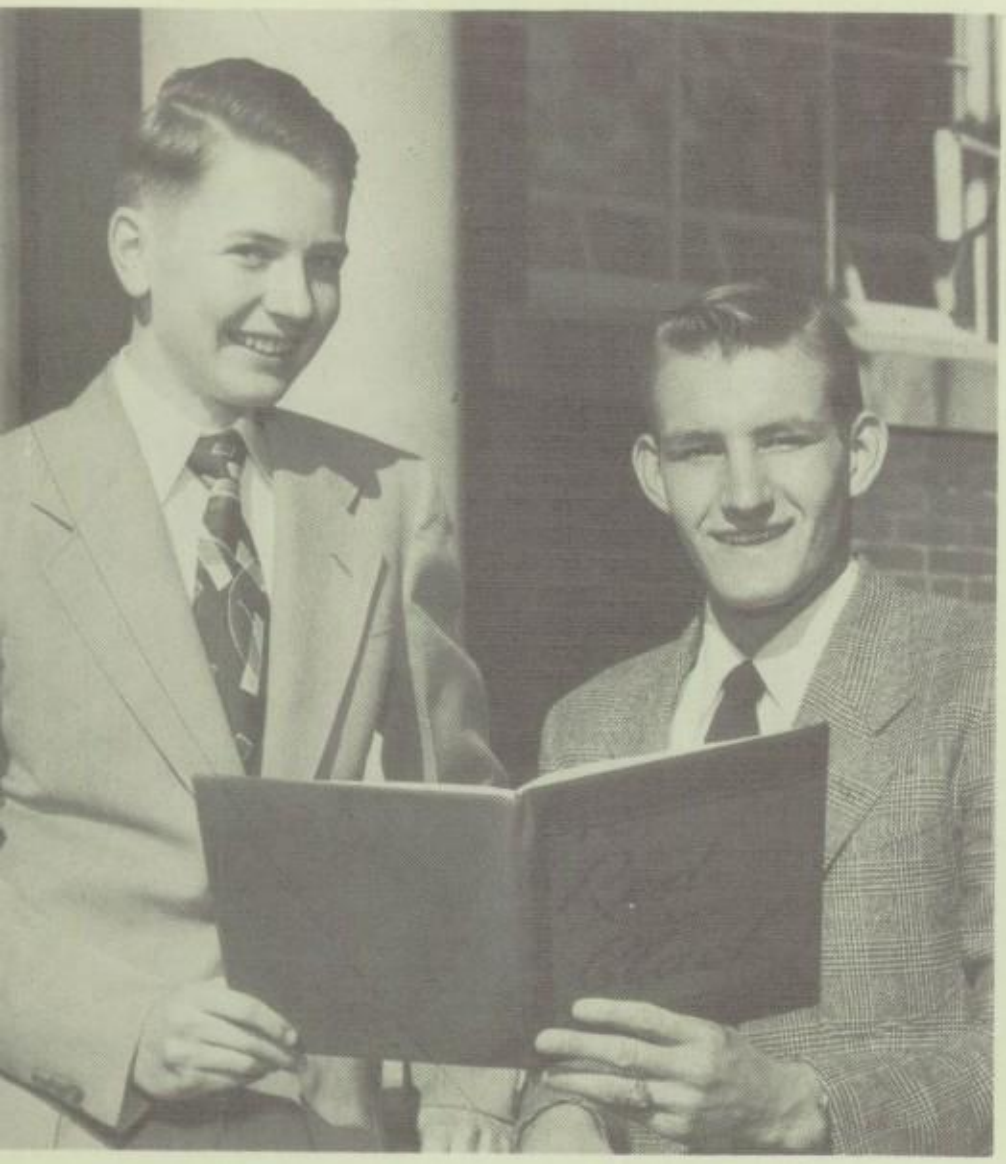
"The Red and Black," once published quarterly,



Work on the yearbook begins in earnest as the business staff of the 1953 "Red and Black" holds a meeting before their drive for sponsorships—(standing) J. Hird, G. LeMere, J. Goodrich, J. Doten, B. Hanks, (sitting) N. Wakeman, R. Whitney, W. Batchelder, R. Schneider, S. Palmer, J. Jamroz, M. Gibson, J. Twombly.

Planning of an attractive yearbook designed to convey the traditions of Stevens is discussed by the art staff—J. Madeja, P. Gouin, J. L'Heureux, J. Fontaine, S. Barter and A. Rose.

has, for sixteen years, been the annual publication of Stevens.



Editor Theodore Lehner and Assistant-Editor David Penniman examine a previous issue of the "Red and Black" in the hope of improving the present issue.

The subscription staff—M. MacIver, B. Jacobs, O. Wentzell, D. Gaudreau combine to sell Mrs. Dorothy Kuzmich, secretary to the principal, the first copy of the 1953 "Red and Black."

Typists B. Hadley, J. Richard, P. Bowles, P. Menard and P. DeVoyd examine copy as the script for the new yearbook is submitted by staff writers.

The merchants and citizens of Claremont have for many years sponsored "The Red and Black."

The Staff of "The Red and Black" wishes to thank especially the citizens and merchants of Claremont, the members of the senior Distributive Education Class, Mr. John Titchen, and Donald Watson, a junior; the aid and interest of all the above have been invaluable and have made a success of the 1953 edition of the Stevens High School yearbook.
